SURVEY OF BULGARIAN PRESS PROPAGANDA, 1 - 28 APRIL 1952

This report is an analysis of Bulgarian propaganda for the first 4 weeks of April 1952. It is based on an examination of 28 issues of Rabotnichesko Delo, organ of the Central Committee of the Bulgarian Communist Party, published 7 days a week. The total space in a single issue of the 4-page, seven-column newspaper is 502 column inches (including headlines). The composition of a typical issue of Rabotnichesko Delo is as follows:

The first page is, of course, used for the most outstanding news of Communist interest. The editorial appears on the left side, taking two columns and covering almost the length of the paper. Often the first page also carries a feature entitled "In the Soviet Union," taking up two columns and the length of the paper. The center three columns of the first page usually contain an exhortation of some type for greater industrial and agricultural production or an article of similar nature.

Page 2 usually contains a three-column feature, "Party Life," covering about two thirds the length of the page. It discusses Communist Farty matters, such as Bulgarian Communist heroes, youth, training, instructions, agitation, etc. The rest of the page is devoted to cultural subjects, such as book reviews, movies, literacy, art, poetry, etc. (about one third of the whole page), and a feature of varying subject matter somewhat in the nature of an aditorial covering the bottom third of the page, and often continuing to page 3.

The third page contains most of the "factual" information on industry, agriculture, finance, etc. It also contains, more or less regularly, a roundup of news from the Communist-bloc countries called "In the People's Democracies," taking up a single column. Page 3 is also used for propaganda against enemies

Page 4 is the normal rest for interestional news. In milition, movies, mis, radio programs, and sports usually take part of one column.

This analysis considers the main themes appearing in the paper, and includes only those themes which are carried in more than one of the wasks covered. The propagands has been divided into these categories: (1) international Community, (2) anti-West (including enti-Tugoslav), and (3) demestic propagands. The two busic criteria used to determine the relative importance of the themes are: volume of material (quantitative criteria), and its prominence (prominence criteria). The quantitative criteria include the number of column inches and number of articles devoted to the theme, and the number of days the theme appears in a given period. The prominence criteria include column inches, number of articles, and number of days the theme appears on the front page. Prominence is determined more exactly by a count of the front-page articles appearing at the top of the front page and for how many tops. The last provinence criterion is the number of editorials devoted to the theme.

Handing the propagands themes for the 4-week period in their order of impartance from the Communist viewpoint, as determined by applying machanically and uncritically the nine criteria noted above, gives the following:

International Communica

- i. "In the Soviet Union" and other USSR and Satellite news

- 3. International Economic Conference in Moscow
- 4. International Conference for the Protection of Children

- 6. 22d Congress of British Communist Party
- 7. Chinese artists in Bulgaria

In a critical analysis of the themes, the following may be noted:

In terms of prominence, space, and persistence, the features "In the Soviet Union" and "In the People's Democracies" rated first place in propaganda for international Communism for the 4-week period. But since these are regular features and had no unusual aspects, it can perhaps be assumed that they did not have special propaganda significance.

The largest amount of space in the 4-week period was devoted to the Moscow Economic Conference as an instrument of international cooperation, with 34 articles, 718 inches, but the conference appeared on the first page only once during the month. It received attention for the first 3 weeks and was then dropped except for one 36-inch article on 27 April. The Conference ended on 12 April. First-page space devoted to themes of international Communism was taken up, naturally enough, by accounts of Stalin's answers to the questionnaire of American newspaper reporters and by exchange of birthday greatings among Communist-bloc leaders (Beirut and Kin II-song). Stalin's interview was carried heavily for only one day in the second week (two articles, including one first-page). The birthday calebration was carried for the second 2 weeks (335 inches, 20 articles, including 14 first-page).

The international Conference for the Protection of Children /see 00-W-22480 and CC-W-22988/ held in Vienne 12 - 16 April was carried for the last 3 weeks of the period and accounted for 262 inches, 24 articles, on 11 days. Only three articles were on the front page.

In the lest 2 weeks the common theme of "friendship" runs through a group of 16 articles (179 inches) on intra-bloc relations (including one article on Chinese-Japanese Communist friendship) and seems unusual enough to warrant mention as a separate theme.

It would seem to be of considerable significance, from the viewpoint of the importance placed by the Communist bloc on British left-wing sentiment, that the 22d Congress of the British Communist Party was covered during 2 weeks by seven criticies, the first of which, a congratulatory telegrem from the Bulgarian Communist Party, was given the tog billing usually reserved for the affairs of bloc countries. An article in the same paper speaks of the growing anti-American sentiment in Britain and emphasizes the interests of the British people as

In contrast, the Second Congress of the Albanian Workers' Party was given less coverage and did not appear on the first page.

China appeared in the news fairly constantly (17 articles in 14 days, none on the first page) in the reporting of Chinese artist rouges touring Bulgaria.

In anti-West propaganda, the US was the chief target, as is to be expected, getting a little more than half of the propaganda (1,135 of 2,156 inches) directed against the West and appearing continuously. Of the anti-US propaganda, 72 percent (816 inches) was related to biological warfare and other atrocities allegedly committed by the US in Korca.

The Grock spy trials and other anti-Greek propaganda were carried for all 4 weeks, but were displaced in quantity and prominence in the last 2 weeks when the German peace treaty came under heavy fire.

The German peace treaty averaged over 200 inches, 17 articles, per week, and was covered for 11 out of 14 days, whereas the anti-Greek propagands averaged 60 inches, 5 articles, per week and was covered for 14 out of 28 days. The Greek trials were on the first page four times in the first 2 weeks only; the peace treaty was front-paged for 2 days.

It is interesting to note also that coverage of the German treaty declined slightly in volume and prominence during the fourth week. In the third week, of 20 articles published in 6 days, two were on the first page. In the fourth week, of 14 articles sublished on 5 days, none was front-paged.

Anti-Yegoslav propaganda was given 367 inches, 27 articles, for 20 of the 28 days, but not one article reached the first page.

Bulgarian demestic propaganda dealt mainly with economic matters in cornection with the approaching May Day and spring planting, as well as production pledges in honor of May Day. These two themes accounted for almost two thirds of the demestic propaganda and far outshone other demestic themes on the first page.

Most of the remainder of the domestic propagands was accounted for by the "Party Life" feature.

A tabulation (by criteria) of main Bulgarian propagands themes during the 4-week period 1 - 28 April 1952 follows. Only those themes are included which appeared in more than one of the weeks covered and more than once in each of those weeks. It is evident, then, that no theme is included in the tabulation unless it was mentioned at least 4 days and during at least two weeks.

In ranking the themes, each of the criteria was assigned the same value. Of any two themes, that rating higher in the greatest number of riteria ranked higher in order of importance.

In the following table, the first three columns represent the quantitative criteria; the last six, the proximence criteria.
